COLONEL LEON TROUSDALE, state superintendent of public instruction, in reply to a letter of inquiry from Mr. R. W. Pittman, county superintendent of Fayette county, who asks for instructions relative to the obligations of county trustees in disbursing school funds, expresses surprise that any such questions should ever have arisen under the school law. He holds that the county trustee is the simple custodian of the school fund until called for by the proper officers for the interests of the public schools, and is clothed by the law with no power to decide when the money is needed for the interests of the schools. Whenever said money is received, he is bound by the law to report the same to the county superintendents, and to the directors of each school district. (See section 43.) Why is he required to make this report? Section 20, sub-section 10, answers this question. The district directors are by said sub-section required "to draw upon the county trustee in favor of the treasurer of the district for any school money in the hands of the trustee for distribution." This language does not limit the directors to any time, but is broad and comprehensive, and means all times, whenever the trustee may have school money in his hands. It might as well be said that such drafts should only be drawn every two years, as to say they shall be drawn every year. The restriction in either case would practically close the public year for the salary for their services. The power to draw on refuse to pay when the drafts are drawn, and it can be shown that he has the money in his hands, a mandamus caon district, and next to pay the same est of the schools, and then draw upon dale, after being thus clear and explicit, adds that it is the duty of the county superintendents to initiate proceedings against county trustees who obstinately afternoon. We earnestly hope that refuse to disburse the school money according to law within their respective counties, calling on the attorneys-general, if necessary, to assist them. Of course, it is to be hoped that no such contingency will arise, and the trustees perintendent.
